On Monday, eight Jewish young adults engaged in an art workshop called "Let There Be Light" led by artist Tova Speter of The MEM Project.

Participants learned about the theme of light as it relates to Chanukah and created their own set of colorful candles for the upcoming holiday. They said they enjoyed meeting other young people in Boston who value Jewish community and have similar creative interests.

The MEM Project, which holds its events at various locations, will offer a stained-glass workshop in January. Visit www.thememproject.org for more information.
